SPECIAL DELIVERY MAIL WILL BE LEFT WITHOUT RECEIPT

Because of a recent ruling of the postoffice department in which the attention of the public is directed to the fact that the special delivery system is designed for speedy delivery of mail and not for its safety, announcement was made yesterday by S. J. Michelson, postmaster, that henceforth special delivery mail will be delivered without receipts, and in cases where the recipients are not at home or in their offices when the mail is delivered, it will be left in the regular mail receptacles, with a note under the door that it has been placed in the boxes.

It has been the custom heretofore to require receipts for special delivery mail, which made personal delivery essential. When, as often happened, there was no one there to receive the mail and receipts for it, it was necessary to return it to the postoffice and send it again on the regular delivery, which practically nullified the object of the special delivery system. In other cases, according to Postmaster Michelson, the state of affairs caused by the fact that the special delivery mail consisted to business and professional offices would be delivered after the regular postman had made his rounds, and the offices were not open until after the first regular delivery had been made. In these cases the recipients would wonder why their special delivery mail had not been delivered sooner, when, in fact, it had been delivered and then taken back to the postoffice because it was impossible to get receipts for it.

Under the new system, messengers will deliver the special delivery mail and if personal service cannot be effected, will leave it. In the case of apartment houses or office buildings the messenger, if personal service cannot be had, will leave the mail in the regular office receptacle and will leave a notice under the door of the apartment or office that the mail has been delivered. When, however, the receptacle is near the door of the apartment or office no notice will be left.

Matter too large to be placed in the regular receptacles will not be left but will be returned to the postoffice and will be delivered with the regular mail when there is someone present to receive it.

Particular stress is laid on the fact that the new system has been placed in effect because the special delivery plan has for its object the speedy delivery of mail. Registered, insured and C. O. D. mail will be delivered and receipted for in the usual manner, as in these cases the prime object is safety. Demanding receipts for special delivery mail, it is pointed out, nullifies to a great extent the object of delivery, while making it slightly safer, which is an object never intended in the special delivery system. All mail containing currency or articles of value should be registered as heretofore.

CITY MAY ACT TO INSURE SAFETY IN USING GAS HEATERS

Appointment of a city gas inspector will be recommended by City Health Officer Dr. H. K. Beauchamp as a result of cases of carbon monoxide poisoning, some of which resulted fatally. It has been announced unofficially. The matter of such an appointment probably will be introduced at a city commission meeting in the near future. More than a dozen cases of carbon monoxide poisoning have been reported within the past three years. It was said, and three deaths have been traced directly to its effects, it was stated.

"Greatest care should be exercised in the installation of instantaneous gas heaters, especially in small rooms where free ventilation is impossible," said a city official yesterday. "We have heard that some of these heaters are not provided with the proper vents to carry off the fumes."

"Carbon monoxide is one of the most dangerous of all gases," he continued, "for the pure carbon monoxide is absolutely odorless. One does not fully realize that he is slowly being overcome. Death is likely to be instantaneous, or the victim may live for a period of hours. There is no doubt that many persons have inhaled carbon monoxide gas without realizing it. That they were not completely overcome is due to the fact that they got into the open air before the gas had a chance to do its work."

For this reason, the speaker declared, it is probable that the city commission will take action to insure safety measures in the use of gas. If the plans of the city health officer are carried out to the letter, he said, the city inspector will visit every home in which a gas heater has been installed. Gas furnaces will also be subjected to inspection, it was declared, for they also are likely to give off poisonous fumes if not properly installed.

One positive case of carbon monoxide poisoning was reported last Saturday. Mr. Bear, residing at 392 North First avenue, was a victim of the gas while preparing for a bath. When his body struck the floor, however, it aroused other persons in the house and he was carried into the open air, where he quickly revived under the care of a physician.

WEATHER REPORTED FAVORABLE TO STOCK

Much warmer weather prevailed in all sections of the grand canyon during the past week which taken in connection with the fact that there was no stormy weather nor high winds made the period a favorable one for stock. At the close of the week the snow covering was confined to summer ranges having disappeared rapidly from lower elevations. The loss of moisture by evaporation was large but springs and streams are holding water well; water holes, however, showed considerable loss. Patches of snow remain on the ground in the vicinity of Grand Canyon, Williams and Flagstaff. At Carr ranch, on the Roosevelt watershed, three inches of snow are on the ground while near the top of Baker mountain the depth ranges from six to eight inches.

Where water has been scarce for any length of time the condition of stock ranges from poor to fair. This is true of many southern sections particularly in the valleys and at low elevations. In the Chiricahua national forest the weather has been remarkably cold and dry; nearly all classes of stock are holding up well except on certain ranges where water is getting low and some suffering is resulting. On the northeastern plateau a considerable amount of feeding has been done. The forest ranger at Pinal Ranger Station near Globe reports that there is only 25 per cent of the average depth of snow on the ground and that the prospects for stock and irrigation water for the coming season are poor. Reports from the forest ranger at Coconino, Arizona, are to the effect that snow depths in the White mountains and Blue range are only one half what they were at this time last year; sheep, cattle and horses are wintering well and no feeding has been done thus far. Range feed continues excellent in the Pinal section and stock good; where water is abundant stock are excellent.

Weather has favored cotton picking during the last week but progress has been slow, owing to unfavorable economic conditions. Piles of unginned cotton in the doorways of farmers are a common sight in the Salt River valley.
